Poultry & egg producer with retail distribution network
agri · Rajshahi Division

SEEKING	INSTRUMENT	VERIFICATION PROGRESS	REVENUE
₳60–90 lakh	Revenue share	3/5	₳6.5–7.5 crore/yr

OVERVIEW

A second-generation family agri-business in Rajshahi that has grown from a backyard flock in 2011 to a 42,000-layer operation with its own feed mixing unit and contracts supplying 130+ grocery retailers across three districts. Daily output of ~38,000 eggs moves through a mix of contracted retailers and wholesale. The founder's son, an agri graduate, now runs operations.

BUSINESS MODEL

B2B2C via contracted grocery retail + wholesale. Feed self-mixing cuts ~12% of feed cost versus market rates. Revenue-share payments proposed against daily collection reports.

FINANCIALS

Revenue ₳6.5–7.5 crore/yr, steady 11–13% net margin. Receivables are low (retail is largely cash). Feed is 65% of costs — the biggest sensitivity. No bank debt beyond a small agri-equipment loan.

TEAM

12 full-time staff including two veterinary assistants on call, a feed-mill operator, and a distribution coordinator managing 3 delivery vans. Family members handle procurement and accounts.

USE OF FUNDS

Automated feed & watering lines	48%
Climate-controlled shed upgrade	27%
Egg grading & packing machine	15%
Delivery fleet maintenance	10%

WHAT OUR ADVISORS NOTICED

Strengths: diversified retail distribution keeps pricing power honest; the second-generation leadership is professionally trained. Watch-outs: biosecurity protocols are adequate but not best-in-class; the revenue-share instrument suits the cash-heavy model better than equity.

KEY RISKS

- 1. Feed prices fluctuate with global markets
- 2. Disease outbreak is an industry-wide risk
- 3. Power dependency for climate control

Verification reduces risk. It does not remove it.
